Save the Dates
Two Opportunities to Engage in Common Core Strategies

The challenges of meeting the Common Core Standards are top of mind for educators in our public school system. But how can school and public librarians work together? How can librarians play an engaging role alongside school administrators and teachers? Rutgers’ School of Communication and Information Professional Development Studies presents a workshop and conference for school and public librarians to discuss challenges presented by the Common Core, as well as to share strategies for success.

Public & School Librarians Collaborate on Common Core
Thursday, December 5, 2013
4:30-6:30 p.m.

How can school and public librarians meet the challenge of the Common Core? Learn how to build links across all professions in this practical and professional development workshop for all school and public librarians.

An Essential Team for Common Core Success: Librarians, Teachers & Administrators
Friday, February 7, 2014
9 a.m.-3 p.m.

Principals, teachers and librarians share thoughts on strategies for Common Core success. Work in cross-disciplinary teams on projects you can implement immediately in your classroom and libraries.

This is a joint conference hosted by the School of Communication and Information and the Graduate School of Education.

For more information or to register, visit our website.

Professional Development Studies
Helping People Put Information to Work